The page features a navigation menu on the left with links for Legislation, Standards, Statistics, Accidents & Incidents, Best Practice Awards, Training & Motivation, Management, Media, Address Directory, Campaigns, Risk Assessment, Insurance Systems, and Transport. The main content area includes a header for 'quarry-safety.net safety & health in quarries.', a breadcrumb trail 'quarry-safety.net » Management » The Quality Seal "Systematic Safety" – Successful Transfer of the ILO-Guideline', and a title 'The Quality Seal "Systematic Safety" – Successful Transfer of the ILO-Guideline'. Below the title is a user rating section showing 'User Rating: ●●●○ / 1' and a 'Rate' button. The article text, written by Peter Schrandt on Monday, 13 February 2006, describes the development of a management system by StBG and BBG for the mining and mineral extracting industries. It highlights that active and verifiable OSH management is a vital need for many companies, as 90% of accidents are organizational or behavior-related. It also notes that work-related accidents and occupational diseases are higher in SMEs than in larger companies. The article concludes by stating that StBG and BBG developed two tools to enhance systematic safety and health management in SMEs:

1. The management manual "Systematic Safety"
